

A Hot Wife's Pre-Date Checklist

HowToBeAHotWife.com

Dating your husband is a fun and necessary activity for a hot wife, but like anything, it can be stressful, especially if you're out of practice or when your day-to-day obligations get in the way. Following a simple checklist can help you to relax and have the time of your life, every time.

With a little planning, you can have an amazing night! Try these steps to make your date a success:

- Treat your husband like a new guy, every time! Figure out what you're wearing the night before. You want to wear something that looks good on you and is appropriate for the occasion. Selecting your clothes the night before can give you enough time to wash your black socks or to go shopping if your pants are suddenly too small.
- Clean the car. If your date involves your car, wash it and clear out any clutter! Hubby will appreciate the effort, and you'll appreciate the clean car! Two birds, one stone.
- Know where you're going. If you're traveling to someplace you haven't been before, ensure you know where you're going. Get on a mapping website, if necessary. Figure out how long it will take you to get there. You'll appreciate this later, trust me!
- Shower, shave, and shampoo. And condition. And do whatever you usually do right before hubby tells you how hot you look. If it's been awhile, step it up a notch!
- Brush and floss your teeth. Brushing is a given. If you rarely floss, start now. It's good for you and it'll make your breath better for those stolen kisses later.
- Trim any undesirable hair. This usually applies to men and it usually means ears and nose. No one likes to look at it, regardless of what your mom says...but it also applies to women. You know how he likes it, lady. Do what you have to do.
- Bring some gum or mints. Bad breath is a turn-off, even when you've been married 100 years. You can use these throughout the date, but it's especially important after eating.
- Money. Some places still aren't able to accept debit or credit cards. Remember to bring some cash, just to be safe. It's advisable to have two forms of payment. Prepare for the worst—both of you should carry money to be safe.
- Gas. Ensure your car has enough gas to get you where you need to go. Think about how annoying it would be to run out of gas on a date. Talk about taking the wind out of a girl's sails!
- Allow plenty of time to doll yourself up. Many people have a pet peeve about punctuality. Attempt to get ready early. It's common courtesy to be on time, but you and I both know that husbands, even patient ones, might be pleasantly surprised to find you waiting for him when it's time to go.

- Launch the evening with a compliment for your honey, and have fun. Flattery can get your date off to a great start. Allow yourself to have an enjoyable time—and for once, try not to talk about bills, kids or anything else that takes away from the romance of it all!
